

Criteria for Bereavement Support and Bereavement Counselling

We offer our bereavement service to people over the age of 18 who are experiencing difficulty in their grieving process and/or who are struggling with specific issues around the death of their loved one.

As grief and bereavement are normal human reactions to loss, we don't usually accept referrals until three months after bereavement. We know from experience that our intervention and support is not always helpful in this first phase of mourning.

Referrals are accepted from GPs

Some types of bereavements need more specialist support than we can provide, e.g. existing addictions, children and young people, therefore we will unfortunately be unable to accept some referrals but may be able to signpost you to more appropriate agencies.

We can help you through your grief

Whoever has died, your loss is unique to you, and you will cope with it in your own way. Bereavement is highly personal and is often a traumatic event. People go through a range of reactions and emotions when someone they are close to dies. It is normal to feel sad, numb or angry when you lose a loved one.

Bereavement support helps you to talk through emotions and may help you to understand the process of grief.

Counselling

Regular one to one counselling sessions (with a qualified counsellor or counsellor in training.) Sessions last 50 minutes. This is a free service. The service operates Monday to Saturday. Flexible, early and late appointments can be accommodated.

All counsellors are BACP (British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy) members and work within the BACP Ethical Framework for the Counselling Professions.

Confidentiality

Counselling is confidential. However, we have a legal obligation to share with the authorities disclosures around serious crime. We also have a duty of care to prevent harm to yourself or others. These limits to confidentiality are outlined on our website and will also be explained in full at your first appointment.

Because grief is so individual we want to make our support individual to you. Here's what we can offer:

Monthly support group for bereaved parents

Grief Workshop

Led by a counsellor and a creative therapist. A series of five sessions focusing on the grief process, encouraging expression of feelings through creative work and learning about self-care. For people accessing counselling.

Ecotherapy Group

Led by a counsellor and gardener. Six sessions of horticultural/outdoor therapy during the summer months. For people accessing counselling.

Social support

We run several social groups within communities across Rochdale, Heywood and the Borough. Please contact the counselling team at the Hospice for specific information. These are focused on meeting new people over a coffee or tea. The groups are led by trained volunteers.
